Medtrade 2023 will take place at the Kay Bailey Hutchison Convention Center in the Convention Center District in downtown Dallas. “Switching to one show per year was motivated by feedback from attendees and exhibitors,” says York Schwab, show director, Medtrade. “Moving the show to Dallas is part of the same equation. Dallas is centrally located with reasonably-priced lodging, exhibitor-friendly rules, first-rate transportation, great restaurants, and lots of non-stop flights arriving from countless cities.”

The 2023 show will simply be called “Medtrade” and will not include additional modifiers that deal with regions or seasons. According to Schwab, the three-day show is designed to pack a lot of information and products into a cozy timeframe. “Time is money and we believe three days offer tremendous value for people who are looking to get out of the office, but not for too long,” he says. “The main takeaway is that the majority of attendees and exhibitors wanted one central show as a rallying point for the industry. They wanted it in Dallas and they wanted it in the spring to properly launch the new year. We listened, and we are looking forward to a new era in 2023.”
